Louisville, Ky., June 21.—
"Then weep no more, my lady,
"then weep no more today,
will sing one song of my old Kentucky
home."

Not one time, but many hundred times the Kentuckians in Louisville this week have heard Foster's "Old Kentucky Home." All the brass bands from all the were again. A quartette of negroes at the corner of Fourth and Walnut streets sings "Weep no more, my lady with and level not the corner of Fourth and Walnut streets sings "Weep no more, my lady with adder by the custom house building saws satiently at "The sum shines bright in my old Kentucky home." some boys satiently at "The sum shines bright in my old Kentucky home." some boys satiently at "The sum shines bright in my old Kentucky home." some boys sate was any anderson theatre is going up were whistling it, and a little further down the street a phonograph parlor told distributed the street of the some street Home." All the brass bands from all the country round are here, and their brazen throats blare forth the strain over and over again. A quartette of negroes at the corner of Fourth and Walnut streets sings "Weep no more, my lady" with variations in a high falsetto. A blind fiddler by the custom house building saws patiently at "The sun shines bright in my old Kentucky home," some boys swinging over the excavation where the new Mary Anderson theatre is going up were whistling it, and a little further down the street a phonograph parlor told the same story. And still they smile, these Kentuckians, and even cheer, when the next band somes along. For they are a very happy people, Home is spelled with a very large H. and "My Old Kentucky Home," with its plaintive words and melody is the audible expression of their emotion.

at once the power of a born leader of men.

Very deliberately, in a splendid big voice, he rounded his periods. The roughhewn cabin in which Lincoln was born was just beside the platform in which Watterson stood. With that poor hovel within the range of his vision he was inspired to eloquence, the old-fashioned eloquence of the school readers, the rolling periods of Webster and Patrick Henry and Clay—the kind that brings the tears and 'stirs the emotions. 'Marse Henry' was the orator of the occasion and aroused more enthusiasm than any other individual, but there were others. Old Governor Leslie, nearly 90 years old, was shown much honor as the one-time governor of Kentucky and later on of Montana. Then there were Adlai Stevenson and Governor Francis and handsome young Beckham, the present gov-

The Bingham aerie, headed by the Bingham Cornet band, had a good representation, all of the men carrying red, white and blue Japanese parasols. The effect was attractive, and they were one of the most novel features of the parade. The Salt Lake aerie was headed by the officers dressed in blue shirts and duck trousers. Behind them was the Utah State band and then the members of the local lodge. They numbered over 130 and were all uniformed. The officers led with them the mysterious goat that saw the sunlight the mysterious goat that saw the sunl the mysterious goat that saw the sunlight for the first time yesterday. It so fright-ened him that it took four strong men and an inch rope to hold him in. The parade ended by an automobile fittingly deco-rated and bearing a stuffed eagle. It car-ried a bunch of boosters that let every one know what was going to happen the rest of the day.

In the afternoon and evening beautiful Lagoon was the center of attraction. Thousands of Eagles and their friends swarmed here and enjoyed the festivities. A committee was on hand who saw that there was something doing all the time. Most of the afternoon was spent in sports. The Salt Lake Eagles met a disastrous defeat at the hands of the representatives from American Fork in a game of baseball, as told elsewhere, and Bingham handed it to Bingham Junction in a tugof-war. The event was exceedingly exciting, and it took several minutes of strenuous pulling to decide the victors. Of the footracin gthe star event was the fat men's race. Twelve heavy-weights, all of whom tip the beam at over 200 pounds, were entered. At the finish those in the back bunched and fell and there was an exciting spectacle for a moment. The event excited so much attention that there is a race now scheduled between the winner and one of the men who fell for a side bet of $100.

The other winners are: Sixty Years' Experience of an Old Mrs. Winsion's Soothing Syrup is the prescription of one of the best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and has been used for sixty years with never-falling success by millions of mothers for their children. During the process of teething its value is incalculable. It relieves the child from pain, cures diarrhoea, griping in the boweis and wind colic. By giving health to the child it rests the mother. Price 75 cents a bottle.
